HANDI-TRAVEL-INFO

People with disabilities often find that travelling is fraught with difficulties, either because no-one thought about wheelchair accessibility or because places which claim they are handicap-friendly fail to keep their promises.

We would love to talk to you about these issues. Call us if you are interested in one of the following subjects:

4 different subjects

At the present time we offer talks on four different subjects:

1. Handi-Travel-Info's trip to the Faeroe Islands
2. Disabled and manager of Handi-Travel-Info
3. Disabled people and air travel:
Air under your wheels
4. Advice for hotels and holiday centres

Handi-Travel-Info's trip to the Faeroe Islands

We sailed from Hanstholm on a huge 8-deck ferry. There were lots of things to do on board during the 29-hour voyage. The facilities included a good restaurant, cinema and bar.

There were also handicap-friendly toilets, although there was a little drawback: The toilet paper holder was to the left of the toilet so when you folded the armrest down, the toilet roll was crushed. There was a ramp to the top deck

Disabled and manager of Handi-Travel-Info

I am disabled and I am aware of the challenges disabled people meet in everyday life. As manager of Handi-Travel-Info I make a point of facing these challenges, which I believe are there to be overcome.

Originally I worked at a printing works until I decided to take courses at a technical college. I had to give up my education because of my disability.

With help from a friend, I arrived at Handi-Travel Info in 1998. I drove around Denmark taking measurements. Later I was appointed manager. The work is such an important, positive part of my life that I'll be hanging on to it for quite some time.

People with disabilities and air travel: Air under your wheels

People with disabilities often consider air travel to be a major challenge. How do you get help in the airport and on the plane? Can I get help when you arrive at my destination?

Call Handi-Travel-Info. We'll guide you.

I travelled to Thailand and had no difficulties – neither in the airport nor getting on or off the aircraft.

Advice for hotels and holiday centres

Hotels and holiday centres often call on us to help them refurbish and create new facilities for people with disabilities. Our work includes: measuring, e.g. toilets and entrances, and proposing wheelchair accessible solutions that are cheaper than they think. How does a disabled guest get onto the terrace if there is no ramp?

Did you know that Handi-Travel-Info was involved from the beginning when Feriecenter Slettestrand was refurbished?

How long is a talk?

Choose between:

- A: A 60-minute talk
- B: A 90-minute talk
- C: A 120-minute talk

All include a 30-minute QA session.

Call or email John Sørensen to agree on the fee.
